

Brief Summary

Almost half of this week's callers (9-15 July 2020) were preoccupied by the invasions of locusts devouring crops and grazing land across Somaliland, Puntland, central Somalia, and some southern regions. Concerns were also expressed about containing COVID19, and related effects of the outbreak on livelihoods, jobs, and rising food prices. There were calls for help from flood-stricken communities in Middle Shabelle and Gedo, and reports of water scarcity especially from parts of the north. The following summarises the calls by theme.

Locusts – the majority of the calls about locusts came from regions across Somaliland and Puntland, with calls also from communities in Galmudug, Hiran, Middle and Lower Shabelle, and Gedo. Most were reporting the devastation of farms and community grazing lands. Knowing that aerial spraying activities are ongoing in some places, many called for the control teams to come to their areas. Some wanted to know what their authorities were doing and why they had not received any intervention. A caller in El-Afweyn, Sanag, claimed that 'poisoned' locusts from sprayed areas were heading their way and needed to be stopped to prevent health risks. In Bari, a caller said affected farmers should bring chickens to eat the locusts. In Galkayo, callers said the locusts had left no fodder for the livestock. In Adado, a caller wanted local leaders to confirm whether it was allowed to kill the locusts. Farmers in Mataban, Hiran, wanted to know how to prepare in case the locusts reached them. Farming communities complained of losses in Mahaday, Jowhar, Afgoye and Wanleweyn. Farmers in Burdhubo, Gedo, said they had been hit by locusts followed by floods and had lost everything including their generators.

Floods – Farming communities in Middle Shabelle (Jowhar and Balad) reported having had their farms and crops wiped out by river floods and not receiving any aid or help at all. Callers in Balad said it was the second season in a row they had been flooded out. Callers in Bardera, Gedo, said they had been hit by locusts during the rains and now the river had flooded their farms.

COVID19 – the calls on this topic included questions about particular risks and symptoms, observations on local compliance with prevention measures, and comments about secondary consequences of the pandemic. A caller in Awdal, Somaliland, asked if the infection rates were falling. Callers from Lasanod complained of having inadequate medical facilities. A caller in Galkayo wanted the travel bans lifted, while a caller in an unspecified southern location said the ban on khat had destroyed his livelihood. Callers complained about rising food prices in Bosaso, Garowe and Galkayo. Several callers in Puntland demanded measure to stabilise the dollar exchange rate. Questions about risks included: can you get infected through cooked food (Awdal), is someone with hepatitis at high risk (Galkayo), and can you get infected from touching your livestock (Jowhar). A caller in Adado urged keeping the numbers down through good practices; a caller in Abudwak complained there was no water. A caller in Mahas, Hiran, said they needed water and face masks.

WASH – specific calls about water shortage, apart from those mentioned above, came from Sanag, Bari, and M. Shabelle.

Livestock – pastoralists in Sool and Sanag complained of disease killing their camels and asked for veterinary help and advice. Other calls for help with goat diseases came from Puntland, central regions, and M. Shabelle.
