

Brief Summary

The biggest number of calls to Radio Ergo's independent platform this week (14-19 August 2020) were on the topic of invasions of locusts affecting farming and pastoralists communities across Somaliland, Puntland, central Somalia, and some southern regions such as Gedo. Other main issues of concern expressed by callers were the effects of further flooding especially in Hiran and Middle Shabelle; questions around symptoms and protection against Coronavirus; and water shortages in some areas. The following summarises the calls by theme.

Locusts- many callers from Somaliland (Togdher, Sool and Sanag) reported invasions of locusts. Some said the locusts were new in their area, whilst others for example in Badhan, Sanag, said the locusts had been plaguing the area for more than three months. A caller from Awr-bogeys (Sool) said it would be hard to recover from the losses being incurred. In Sanag, callers said it was raining and the locusts were eating up the vegetation as it grew. Farmers in Durdur, Sanag, reported losing tomatoes, guava, pawpaw, lemons, and mangoes. A caller in Bursalah, Mudug, said they were losing their second watermelon harvest in a row to the locusts. IDPs in Adado, Galgadud, said they were suffering the dual challenges of locusts and poor sanitation. In Abduwak, a caller asked if they should cut down the trees to stop the locusts from landing on them. A caller in Qansahley, Gedo, said there was no food left for their children.

Floods- callers in Hiran, especially Beletweyn, complained of yet more flooding and loss of crops and property. Callers in Balad, M. Shabelle, said they were not getting any aid due to corruption. A female caller in Balad said their farms had been destroyed in floods and their livestock were fetching poor prices, so their livelihoods had been eroded. In Jowhar, callers said flooding had washed away crops and homes and caused displacement. The displaced were not even able to cook for themselves.

COVID19- most of this week's callers on the topic wanted answers to questions about symptoms and prevention measures. These calls came from the north, especially Togdher and Bari, as well as Galmudug, Hiran, the Shabelle regions, and Gedo. Many sought responses from our CV19 Radio Doctors (ongoing weekly programme segments). A female caller in Guriel, Galgadud, complained that they had no water, soap, or masks for protection. A caller in Galkayo said Coronavirus had devastated the economy and people's lives. A student calling from Guriel wanted the government to standardize exam results because of effects of Coronavirus.

Health services- there were complaints about lack of access to health care in Adado, Galgadud, and conflict-torn Towfiq in Mudug.

Water shortages- there were calls from communities lacking water in Puntland and Sool/Sanag, as well as Gelinsor and Galkayo in Mudug, and Qurajome in Bakool.
