

Brief Summary

The main concerns raised by callers this week (14-19 September 2020) were the locust invasions mainly across the northern regions; water shortages; effects of river floods; livestock diseases; and Coronavirus. The spread of issues was similar to the calls received in the previous two weeks, although the numbers complaining about water scarcity were higher. (Note that Radio Ergo's independent platform is open to callers on any topic. The messages are collated and shared as a snapshot of people's concerns, although they are unverified at this stage. Some calls are followed up journalistically by Ergo reporters, and/or by humanitarian responders). The following summarises this crop of calls by theme:

Locusts – many calls were recorded from farming and pastoralist communities across Somaliland and Puntland regions, with a few from the Shabelle regions and Bay and Gedo. A caller in Gabiley, Awdal, said the rains had begun and the locusts seemed to be drinking up the rainfall. A caller in Berbera said although they had lost most of their crops last year they were planting again now despite the locusts being present. There were several calls from Erigabo saying the locusts had eaten all the vegetation and animal fodder. Callers in Gorofley, Sool, said the weather was still dry but the locusts had invaded. Callers in Bari asked for locust spraying measures to be brought to their areas. A caller in Awdhegale, L. Shabelle, described crawling hopper bands and flying locusts. Farmers in Bardale and Baidoa in Bay said their farms and food security were at risk.

Water shortage – calls about water scarcity came from various northern locations including parts of Togdher, Sanag, Sool, and Nugal. Callers in Sool asked for water aid. Meanwhile, some others called to report rainfall e.g. in Garadag, Sanag, where struggling pastoralists were encouraged to move to save their animals. A caller in Burtinle said there was no livestock fodder so their goats were eating food meant for people. In Galmudug, callers in Amara, Guriel, Dhusamareb, and Abudwak complained of drought, dried up or lacking water sources, and livestock suffering without water and fodder. Other calls for water aid came from El-Jalle in Hiran and Bardera in Gedo.

Floods – callers displaced by river floods in Lafole and Beletweyn in Hiran said they needed assistance including food and mosquito nets. Others in Beletweyn said they were returning to their homes as the waters had receded. Another caller in Hiran wanted more information and flood alerts. Farmers in Wanleweyn, L. Shabelle, said they needed help.

Livestock – callers complained about camel and goat disease in Togdher and Sanag, and about goat disease in Dhusamareb, Galmudug. Callers in parts of Togdher asked for veterinary services ahead of the rainy season. A caller in Bardera, Gedo, said there was a livestock measles outbreak. Other callers asked for veterinary advice and one asked for livestock vaccinations.

Coronavirus – callers in Buhodle, Bosaso, Qardho, Kismayo, and other places had questions to the radio doctors about COVID19 symptoms and recovery. Callers in Garowe in Puntland and Dollow in Gedo urged people to maintain protective measures. A female caller in Beletweyn said it was good that people were getting back to normal life. A volunteer group in Dollow wanted support for its awareness raising efforts. A caller in Togdher asked if abnormal deaths of certain wildlife in the area could be related to Coronavirus. A caller in Badhan, Sanag, wanted more information about the numbers of deaths and recoveries from COVID19. A caller in Adale, Middle Shabelle, claimed there had been an outbreak there and wanted advice from the Radio Sheikh on burial of COVID19 victims.
