

Brief Summary

The main topics of this week's crop of callers to Radio Ergo's open feedback platform (29 September-5 October 2020) were the invasion of new waves of locusts across the northern regions; water shortages in some areas; various health concerns, as well as the continuing Coronavirus.

Covid19 – a third of this week's callers on Coronavirus were female. In Somaliland, concerns were expressed from rural areas. Callers in Sanag said Coronavirus was still among the community and many rural people did not have enough awareness. One caller asked how to distinguish Covid19 from flu. A caller in Togdher asked about the spread of the virus, and another in Borama what alternative protection they could use apart from masks and gloves. A female student in Garowe wanted to know the risks of not wearing masks in school. Another female high schooler in Puntland said they were worried that students were sitting three or four to a desk. A caller in Galkayo asked for distribution of PPE as it was too expensive to buy. A female caller in Abudwak was concerned that there could be further lockdowns as travel seemed to have caused an upsurge in cases. In Dhusamareb, a caller said people had gone back to normal life and asked how they could live with Coronavirus. A few Jowhar callers asked questions about symptoms as well as the spread of the virus. One caller in Middle Juba said they had not experienced the virus there so it must be a disease only among non-Muslims.

Health - there were several callers on health issues from Jowhar, M. Shabelle. A female caller said there was an outbreak of polio among her pastoralist community and they needed intervention (call not yet verified). Another said they needed mosquito nets. A farmer said they had lost everything in the floods and that they lacked health services.

IDPs – among those callers who identified themselves as IDPs, a female in Bosaso said they needed their food cards to be renewed. A caller in Galkayo said they were neglected and lacked shelter and schools. In east Abudwak, a caller complained of poor shelter in the rain and lack of health services. Some IDPs in Dollow said they were suffering from drought and water scarcity and asked the government to help.

Water shortages – there were a number of calls from different regions about drought and water scarcity. In the north, these were from parts of Sool, Sanag and Togdher. A caller in Puntland said he lost his farm to water shortage and locusts and they also needed help digging a well. There were several calls from Mudug, including some saying their livestock were becoming weak. A farmer in Jowhar said they needed water pumps to access remaining water at low levels. In Bay and Gedo callers said the rains had not come. In Gedo, a caller said they had lost their livestock to drought in previous years and were still suffering from water shortage. A caller in Mahas, Hiran, said there was no market for their livestock and they needed food aid.

Locusts – this issue prompted the largest number of calls, especially from Somaliland and Puntland. Numerous callers in Sool (specifically Boame, Kalabaydh, Godale, Hudun, Tukaraq, Awr-Bogeys) reported new influxes of locusts during the first week of October. Many callers from Sanag reported similar fresh waves. In Puntland, there were calls from Bosaso, Qardho, Karkar, and Garowe. People spoke of not being able to see the horizon because of the locust swarms. They asked for spraying control measures. A female caller in El-Aqwan, Galkayo, urged farmers to join hands to fight the locusts. She said their wells had also broken down.

Rain and storms – callers especially from parts of Mudug and Galgadud reported with happiness the arrival of the seasonal rains. There were other calls from people affected by strong winds and rain that damaged houses.
