

Brief Summary

The predominant theme among calls from Radio Ergo's listeners this week (16-22 September 2021) was the shortage of water and continuing drought affecting many parts of the country. Many reported livestock deaths and illness or poor condition of their animals. There was also rising concern about the spread of COVID19. Callers in northern areas reported new invasions of locusts. The following summarises the calls by theme.

Water crisis – pastoralists in Togdher, Sool, and Sanag described drought causing severe water shortage and lack of pasture, with livestock being sick and skeletal. They called for intervention by the authorities or agencies, especially for water delivery. In Bari, callers also requested water aid. The largest number of calls about the water crisis came from central Somalia, especially Mudug and Galgaduud. Mudug callers said they faced drought and lack of livestock fodder, and the water sources had dried up. A female caller in Dusamareb, Galgaduud, noted that the climate was harsh and the seasons had changed. A herder in Bahdo-gaabo said some of his livestock had died whilst another in Adado said they were trying to keep their animals alive. In Do'oley, a caller said the government had done nothing so they were now calling for humanitarian aid from the agencies. In the south, there were similar calls about water shortages and lack of rainfall in Hiran, the Shabelle regions, Bakool, and many from Gedo. A caller in Raga-elle, M. Shabelle, said they faced shortages of water and food and were also in the midst of conflict.

COVID19 – callers in various regions reported cases of what they thought was Coronavirus in their areas, and expressed concern about the spread of the disease. A caller in a remote part of Gedo said many people were affected by Coronavirus and they had no doctors or health centres there. A mother in Jowhar wanted to know how she could confirm if her nine-year-old sick daughter had COVID19. A caller in Buleburte said coughing and sickness were widespread. Callers in Abudwak and Adado said they wanted access to COVID19 vaccines. Female callers in Garowe and Qardo urged people to follow the precautions and to get vaccinated. A caller in Qool-bulale, Salahley, said people were dying of a disease that was not causing fever and wanted to know if it could be COVID19.

Food security & IDPs – a caller in Abudwak said food prices had skyrocketed with cooking oil almost trebling in price. A female caller in Galkayo said they were displaced after losing their livestock and being hit by locusts and needed aid. Another IDP caller in Galkayo said cash aid had been cut from 70 to 25 dollars. A female IDP in El-Jalle, Hiran, said they lacked water but also needed plastic sheeting ahead of the expected rains.

Locusts – callers in parts of the north reported new waves of locusts, including in Hargeisa, Berbera, Togdher and Sanag. A farmer in Sheikh said the locusts were eating away the beans, sorghum and other crops they had planted. A pastoralist in Puntland said whenever some vegetation grew after rainfall the locusts devoured it. A female caller in Wanleweyn said they were suffering from drought and had also been attacked by locusts.
