

Brief Summary

Among the calls to Radio Ergo’s audience feedback platform this week (30 May to 5 June 2024), several callers, including farmers in parts of Hirshabelle, spoke about how they had been impacted by the recent river floods. A number of callers in southern and central regions reported a rise in malaria and diarrhoeal diseases following the rainfall in their areas. Callers especially in northern and southern region continued to report rainfall in their areas, with some noting very high temperatures. A few callers, notably in Puntland, said they were facing drought and water shortage, with some mentioning livestock deaths. The following summarises the calls by theme.

Floods – in Middle Shabelle, one caller said they had been hit by floods and needed help, whilst another in Jowhar said that although their farms had been flooded, they were generally managing. A caller in Halgan village said they were receiving rainfall and their farms had been flooded but nevertheless they remained in good health. A female caller in Lower Shabelle said they had been displaced by floods in Lafoole to Marerka village. In Hiran, a female caller in Beletweyne said they had recovered from the floods and were doing well. Another said they had recovered from the floods but their crops, especially maize, had been attacked by pests and they needed advice on pest control. In Gedo, a caller in Bardera said that after the floods the soil had become poor and their farms were not doing well.

Agriculture – among calls from farmers seeking advice from the weekly farming show experts, several in Middle Shabelle and Hiran reported problems with crop pests. A caller in El-wara, Hiran, said they had not received adequate rainfall and needed help because their crops were failing due to water shortage and disease. A caller in Bay region also said they had not had adequate rainfall for the crops they had planted.

Health – callers in Somaliland, Galgadud, and Middle Shabelle reported increases in mosquitoes and cases of malaria. A caller in Jowhar said they were also experiencing diarrhoea, whilst a caller in Balad wanted advice on malaria treatment. A caller in Elasha-biyaha, Lower Shabelle, said diseases were spreading in hot windy weather there. A caller in Wanleweyn wanted to know if the skin diseases caused by use of skin whitening products could infect others [reference to a recent Radio Ergo broadcast on the health risks and impact of skin whitening chemicals in Puntland].

Health & Education services – a caller in Guriel said they needed the government to establish free health centres serving the poor as there were no public facilities in his area. A caller in Dalama-cune village near Buhodle, Togdher region, said they had no schools in the area and needed aid agencies to establish education and health centres. A caller in God-Dhurwaa village in Adado, Galgadud, said they needed water pumps, schools, and health centres to be established.

Conflict – a caller in Sanag said they were afraid of the clan conflicts going on that were threatening their livestock and property. He added that they had nowhere else to go and needed the conflict to stop. A caller in Lasanod, Sool, said although they had received welcome rainfall, there were clan conflicts in the area. In Galgadud, a female caller in Docol asked the local authorities to stop people from fencing off grazing lands for farming. A caller in Beletweyne, Hiran, asked for pastoralists grazing their livestock near their farms to prevent their animals from eating the farmers’ crops.

Rainfall & Climate – the biggest number of callers reporting rainfall this week were from regions of Somaliland. Some in Yufle, Sanag region, and Togdher mentioned that the temperatures were also very high. One caller assumed this was due to climate change. Some callers in Sanag and Sool said their livestock were now well fed and reproducing after rainfall. In Gedo, two callers in Bardera noted the high temperatures and wanted explanation. A female caller in Wadajir, Banadir, also said it was unusually hot and windy.
