

Brief Summary

The calls about prolonged severe drought just surpassed the number of those reporting rainfall in this week's batch (16-22 April 2026) of feedback collected on Radio Ergo's independent nationwide call-in platform. Some of those mentioning rain indicated that it was scattered or inadequate, or that it began and then stopped. Many callers talked about livestock losses and failing farms, as well as water scarcity and high prices. Also, many callers appealed for aid. The rejection by traders of the Somali shilling notes was also a topic of concern for callers in southern regions. The following summarises the calls by theme.

Floods – a caller in an unspecified location said the Shabelle river had flooded and people needed help in barricading the riverbanks. He added that those people who were damaging the banks should be legally prosecuted.

Currency – several people in southern regions especially Middle and Lower Shabelle complained about traders refusing to accept the Somali shilling notes. A caller in Kuntawarey said it had caused confusion and people couldn't buy food from restaurants because the notes were not being accepted. A female caller in Wanlaweyn said their farms were bare due to lack of rainfall, and in addition they were concerned about the shilling being rejected locally by traders. Another said the ordinary Somali people were victims and he had 100,000 shillings in his hand that nobody would accept.

Women – a female caller in an unspecified location stated that she was happy to be participating in the Radio programmes as a woman. Just like men, women should also participate, she added. (Radio Ergo airs promos encouraging women to call in to the thematic programmes and to share their feedback on this platform).

Climate – a caller in Harardhere, Mudug, wanted climate experts to explain what had caused changes in the current gu rainy season that normally started from the coastal areas, but this year the coastal areas remained dry. (Many listeners request further information and explanation from Somali experts about climate and weather patterns).

Agriculture – several farmers called from parts of Gedo region asking for advice from the experts. One in Huud said their crops had been attacked by pests that had spoilt their harvests. Another in Dendo said they had rainfall but their crops were being affected by birds. A caller in Dollow wanted advice about caterpillars, especially attacking tomato plants. Elsewhere a farmer growing maize complained that some of the plants were growing well but others on the farm were failing and he didn't know why.

Livestock – diseases affecting goats were reported by livestock owners in several regions. A female caller in Hiran region said her goats were sick with runny noses and were refusing to drink water. She wanted treatment advice.

Rainfall – a caller in Armale, Sanag, said they had received a little rainfall that caused many people to migrate to the area, thereby depleting the small amounts of pasture that had grown. He hoped they would get more rainfall. In Ainabo, Sool, one caller said after the rainfall they were now able to sell their livestock, although another caller said that whilst their livestock were recovering the rain seemed to have stopped. Calls from parts of Galgadud indicated that the rainfall was scattered and inconsistent. A female caller in Abudwak said they were doing well after rain that had replenished the water sources. A female caller in Beletweyne, Hiran, said they were doing well although some parts of the region remained dry and she hoped all the villages and districts would get the rain.

Several callers in Middle Shabelle said they were doing well and the river was flowing. One in Jowhar said they were working on their farms growing rice. Several welcomed rain in parts of Bay region, including a caller in Goof-gaduud, who said farmers had started planting their crops. One in Baidoa said they had received heavy downpours. A caller in Sakow, Middle Juba, said people were happy as they had rainfall and the Juba river was flowing with water. Many calls about rainfall came from the southern region of Gedo, although some indicated that it was sparse. A caller in Dollow said the rain had been short-lived and inadequate for farms and livestock; another said they were waiting for the vegetation to grow back. A caller in El-gadud said the rain was only enough to cool down the temperatures. In Lower Juba, callers welcomed rainfall in Kismayo, Gobweyn, and Raskamboni.

Drought – in the north, callers in Burao and Tala-bur said people and livestock were affected by the drought and they needed aid. A caller in War-ibran said a water tank costs $4.5-5, and whilst some areas had rain theirs did not. A caller in Sanag said their livestock were dying. Another in El-ade said the water shortage was severe and they needed help. A caller in Ari-adeye, Sool, also said their livestock were dying and they were appealing for help. In Hiriro, Bari region, a female caller said they were praying for relief from the drought as they were losing their livestock. A caller in Qardo spoke of widespread water shortage. A caller in eastern Garowe asked aid agencies to help them, saying they were nomadic pastoralists who had been unable to migrate and only a few of their livestock remained. In Mudug, a caller in Harardere said their livestock were dying and the area and its surroundings hadn't had any rain. Callers in many parts of Galgaduud including Abudwak, Adado, Biyo-gadud, Gelinsor, Lashordhere, Qalanqal, Hog-dugag, and Guriel complained of severe drought, with some noting livestock losses and asking for aid. A female caller in Guriel said they had only a little rainfall and people were still migrating in search of better conditions. A female caller in Qalanqal asked for aid, describing what they were facing as famine. A few in Hiran and M. Shabelle also noted failed rains. Among callers from several parts of Lower Shabelle, one in Janale said the river had started flowing with water, but it was not enough to irrigate their farms and they needed help. A few in Gedo and L. Juba reported ongoing drought with one caller in Kismayo saying the children were suffering from malnutrition. A caller in Ethiopia's Gashamo said due to the drought people were migrating over the border to Somaliland in search of rain.
