

Brief Summary

Among the messages shared on Radio Ergo's nationwide, independent audience call-in platform this week (22-30 September 2026), callers citing rainfall in their areas came mainly from parts of Hirshabelle and Jubaland states, whilst those complaining of persistent, intense drought or delayed rainfall came mainly from northern and central regions. Several wanted more information on weather updates especially the start of El Nino. Conflict in Baidoa was a major concern for callers, with several saying the airstrikes and fighting had caused deaths and displacements, and that humanitarian conditions had been worsened. Food security reports varied along with the rainfall, with some in Middle Shabelle saying they had good harvests, but others citing rising food prices and mixed fortunes due to the climatic conditions. A number of callers had questions about preventing and treating malnutrition in their children. The following summarises the calls by theme.

Food Security – as selected illustrations of the varying conditions across the country, a caller in drought-hit Sanag region complained that prices were rising and it was becoming harder to afford food. He wanted the government to help them. A caller in Haniga in Middle Shabelle, however, said they had rainfall and were getting good harvests of sesame, maize and beans. A caller in Aro-gadud, Bay region, said farmers had planted crops all over their farmland but the growth was sporadic as they were still awaiting the rain.

IDPs – a caller in Qurdubey, Gedo region, said he was among IDP families who lost their livestock last year. He said they were destitute and didn't have access to health care. They were appealing for help.

Conflict/Governance – a caller in Somaliland's Gabiley said he was among the pastoralists concerned about other people fencing off land in the mountainous areas, where they normally took their livestock to graze. Among several callers in Baidoa, a female caller wanted the federal and state governments to stop the airstrikes and the fighting. Another in Baidoa said many had fled and now lacked shelter ahead of the rains. Another said they wanted to flee but had no money to migrate. One Baidoa caller said they had had little rain and were still suffering from drought and conflict, and the deaths and displacements made things worse.

Weather/El Nino – Regular radio listeners in Togdher, Somaliland, said they wanted to get more weather updates, as these were followed closely by the pastoralists and farmers. A caller in Guriel, Galgaduud, wanted to know when they could expect the El Nino rains to begin.

Nutrition – a mother in Guriel said her small daughter was thin and looked malnourished although she fed her food, water and milk. She wanted to know what to do. A caller in Baidoa said their children under five were malnourished and they didn't know what to do with them. A caller in Bardera, Gedo, asked if the milk of a thin and malnourished mother was still of benefit to the baby. [Radio Ergo runs a weekly Nutrition programme answering listeners' questions. If you are a Somali-speaking expert and can participate, please contact us at radioergonewsroom@mediasupport.org]

Environment – a caller in Hingalol, Sanag region, called three times complaining about the dumping of plastic waste that was harming their livestock. He said they were also facing drought, but consuming plastic was killing more animals than the drought. He called for a ban on plastic bags. Many other callers to the Livestock programme had similar complaints about animals becoming sick or dying after consuming plastic.

A caller in Gobweyn, Lower Juba, complained that people were felling trees using heavy machinery. Another in Lower Juba wanted to know the effect of deforestation on the water supply.

Rainfall – in Jubaland, several callers in parts of Lower Juba including Kismayo and Far-jano reported rainfall. In Gedo, some in Dollow reported sporadic rainfall. A caller in Beledhawo said they had rainfall and the water catchment areas had been replenished. Several in Bardera said they had rainfall and hoped for more. In Lower Shabelle, callers in Wanleweyne, Kurtunwarey, Barawe, and Afgoye celebrated good rainfall and that farms were doing well. A female caller in Jowhar, M. Shabelle, said they had got the rainfall and were doing well, although some areas had no rain. In Hiran, a caller in Beletweyne said the river water level had risen, while a caller in Gonyale, Hiran, said they had only one downpour but were still working on their farms.

Drought and water shortage – in the north, a caller in Togdher said they had a little rainfall in Abdi Dhere but the grazing was depleted by all the livestock. They faced drought again although areas around them had rain. In Sanag region, a caller in Kobal said their livestock were dying due to drought and water shortage and they needed help. Another in El-buh appealed for cash aid. In Sool, a caller in War-idad said their livestock were dying due to lack of fodder. A female caller in Kalabeyr appealed for food and water aid. In Puntland, a caller in Bari region said they were preparing their farms for planting but still hadn't received any rain. Others said their livestock lacked fodder and water. In Mudug, one caller said the rain was scattered with some areas still dry and others getting showers. A female caller in Gumare said they faced severe drought and were appealing for aid. In Galgadud, among several callers in Abudwak one said they faced severe drought and their livestock continued to die. A caller in Dusamareb blamed incorrect weather forecasts and said it was extremely hot and dry and they prayed for rain. Among several in Guriel, a female caller said prices were going up due to the drought. A caller in Godinlabe said they had had no rain and people were desperate. A caller in Hiran indicated rain in some areas but not in others. Callers in Dollow, Gedo, said rain was scattered or in some cases had started then ceased.
